ORIGAMI DIAGRAMS

Swan

The origami swan is the traditional simple swan with a raised neck and a head that points forward, folded from a kite shape made from one square. It is an easy model that takes about five minutes; the only moves that need care are the two outside reverse folds at the end.

Easy - 10 steps - 5 min

1

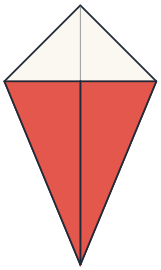

Set the square down as a diamond with the white side up, fold it in half from left to right, and open it to leave a vertical crease.

2

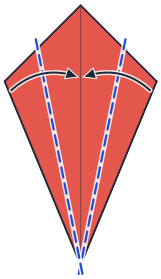

Fold the two lower edges in so they lie along the vertical crease, making a kite with its long point at the bottom.

3

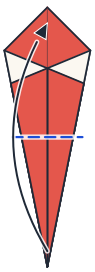

Flip the kite over.

4

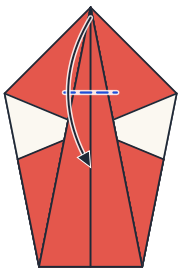

Fold the two lower edges in to the middle crease again. The kite becomes long and slender.

5

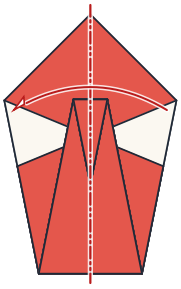

Fold the long bottom point up so its tip meets the top point. This long flap will become the neck.

6

Fold the tip of that flap back down a short way to form the head.

7

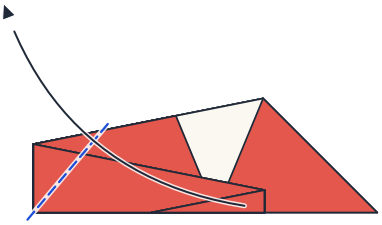

Mountain fold the model in half along the middle crease, sending the right half behind.

8

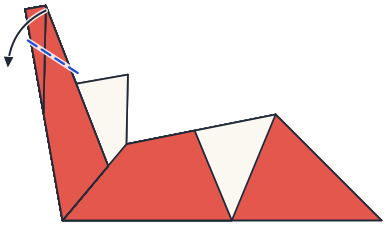

Turn the model a quarter turn so the folded edge runs along the bottom, with the neck at the left.

9

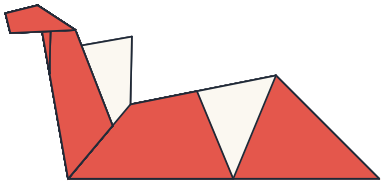

Make an outside reverse fold at the base of the neck: open the layers a little, swing the long point up around the outside of the body along the slanted line, and flatten it so the neck stands up.

10

Make a second, smaller outside reverse fold near the top of the neck so the head points forward.

Done

Spread the two halves of the body a little underneath so the swan sits upright, and curve the neck gently with your fingers. White paper gives the classic look; a black square makes a black swan.
